THE SIGN OF THE CROSS

The sign of the cross represents an important tradition for all Catholics; a gesture that sketches the shape on your own body of the cross Jesus bore and upon which He was crucified. To make the sign of the cross in both the Latin Rite and Eastern Rite, use your right hand to touch first the forehead, then the chest, abdomen, or navel, next one shoulder, and finally the other shoulder, while intoning the names of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit. Often the blessing concludes with the traditional "Amen."

In the Eastern tradition, the faithful make the sign of the cross differently and far more frequently than do those who follow the Roman Rite. Some describe the Catholic Eastern Rite for the sign of the cross, also known as the Byzantine sign of the cross, as "backward" from the Latin Rite. Eastern Rite Catholics touch first their right shoulder and then their left during the blessing. This "backward" sequence actually follows the original, more ancient order of the tradition, common for practice in the Latin Rite as recently as the 16th century. Orthodox Christians make the sign of the cross the same way as do Eastern Rite Catholics.

Eastern Rite congregations adhere to a specified hand position for this rite, as well. Eastern Rite Catholics see the hand posture with a special significance and the finger positions hold symbolic value. In the Eastern Rite, the thumb, pointer and middle fingers extend together, almost as if they held an invisible pencil. These first three fingers represent the Holy Trinity: God the Father; Jesus Christ, the Son; and finally the Holy Spirit. The Holy Trinity describes the three aspects of the Lord, which constitute a single divine essence. The ring finger and little finger point down, touching the palm in a gesture like half of a fist. These two fingers represent the dual nature of Christ, believed to exist as simultaneously divine and human.

"I think that John's Gospel... is the first fruits of the Gospels. We might dare say that the Gospels are the first fruits of all Scripture but that the first fruits of the Gospels is that according to John whose meaning no one can understand who has not learned on Jesus' breast or received Mary from Jesus to be his mother also." - Origen of Alexandria, 184-251, A.D.
